What Was Done in December?

Investment Offer Published

We managed to put all our business details into a simple one-pager, which is distributed to all potential investors. The document highlights our business and financial objectives, forecasts the future, and points the reader to all important documents we've got.

Zold Is More Stable

We managed to resolve a few critical technical issues in Zold Ruby software. Thanks to that, the network became more stable and users are not complaining anymore about missed payments. However, we still have a lot of work to do in order to make software more robust and get rid of a few critical issues still mentioned in our technical Roadmap (was updated recently).

A Large Client

We can't disclose the name of the client, but it's a huge and very famous software company. If they sign the contract with us in January (we are very confident that this will happen), we will get a serious revenue boost and a very positive marketing splash. They are interested to hire us as dedicated contractors for a pretty complex and important Java software library.
