What Was Done in April?

Zold was listed on AlterDice

As we planned, Zold, our non-Blockchain experimental cryptocurrency was listed on its first exchange: AlterDice.com. It is a very important step for us, which demonstrates to our users, investors, and programmers, that the technology we've been developing for over a year, is recognized by the market and is needed. We are planning to get listed on other exchanges soon, we are in the negotation process with over a dozen of them. By the way, thanks to the growth of BTC, the rate of ZLD is $1.51 now.

Online Risk Manager

We created a new satelite project for Zerocracy customers, to help them manage risks in their projects and perform risk-driven development the way it should be done, with qualitative and quantitative analysis, planning, and so on. The tool is called orsk.com and is open source and free for all users. It is still in beta-testing.

Full Integration with Bitcoin

We've implemented our own integration with the Blockchain of Bitcoin, which we didn't have before and had to use Blockchain.info and Coinbase. This was a pretty complex technical task, and we managed to complete it perfectly. Currently, our WTS platform maintains our own private keys, sends and receive Bitcoin payments. We still use Coinbase to purchase BTC when a new funding payment arrives for a Zerocracy project.
